SPONSORSHIP PACKAGE

WELCOME

It is my great pleasure to invite you to participate in the 30th International Conference on Atomic Collisions in Solids and 12th International Symposium on Swift Heavy Ions in Matter. The conference will be held on the 24th – 29th of November 2024 at the Australian National University (ANU) in Canberra, Australia. The conference is targeted at domestic and international professional scientists, academics, post-doctoral researchers, and PhD students. Please help us bring the best experience to our local and international delegates.

Prof. Patrick Kluth,
Conference Chair, The Australian National University, Canberra, Australia.

About the conference

ICACS (International Conference on Atomic Collisions in Solids) and SHIM (Swift Heavy Ions in Matter) are conference series that bring together the global scientific community to exchange knowledge and ideas, promoting a deeper understanding of physical and chemical phenomena involved in the interaction of energetic particles with condensed matter. ICACS originated in 1965 in Denmark and SHIM was first held in 1989 in France. In 2018 both conferences joined forces and instigated a new era of collaborative learning, mutually beneficial for both communities.

About our venue

The Conference is being held at the newly built state-of-the-art Research School of Physics (RSPHys) building, ANU, Canberra, Australia. The facility overlooks the Australian Parliament and includes a state-of-the-art lecture theatre with quantum random-generated seats and several conference rooms. RSPHys is the largest Physics School in Australia, with research excellence in all areas of Physics. Speakers will present live from the spacious auditorium, with advanced acoustic and display systems. The open-space architecture will enable great networking discussions and collaborations and sponsors will be able to exhibit in the open area within the food and beverage area.
